SALEM

ROANOKE WINS.

The College Team Defeated By a Score of 10 to 9.

ROANOKE TIMES BUREAU, HOTEL LUCERNE, SALEM, V The Roanoke baseball club visited Salem to-day and beat the Roanoko college team by a score of 10 to 9 in a finely played and exciting game. In the ninth inning, with the score 10 to 2, the college boys came to the bat, and by good batting and "noisy" coaching got the visitors badly rattled. When the Salem boys ran the score up to 9, with no one out, it looked very blue for Captain Wigmore and his men.

With Press Dolin at the bat. followed by Pechin and O. Oakey, the large crowd present thought they had good reason to give vent to their enthusiasm, and there was so much confusion that and there was so much contaston that the game had to be stopped a few minutes to get the crowd back. Roan-noke seemed to brace up by the little rest, for although the next Salem bat-ters hit the ball hard, good fielding prevented further scoring, Riley ending by a beautiful stop of a hard ball from Calcovic bet Oakey's bat.

Boyd pitched for Roanoke and was in splendid form; nevertheless his opponents hit the ball hard, and but for the fine fielding of Wigmore, Henry, and Hill the result would have been different. Pear Dollin for Salem was as Hill the result would have been differerent. Pres. Dolin, for Salem, was as effective as Boyd, and only six hits were made off him, but these were timely, and, aided by a couple of unfortunate errors, were sufficient to win. Morgan showed up well behind the bat, and will prove a very valuable man in that position for Salem. Walden played first base in first class style. Pechin changed places with Lucas at second, Lucas going to short, and the change worked well. The Roanoke players were Wigmore, 2b; Hill. 3b; A. Brodie, ss; Henry, 1b, P. Brodie, cf; Riley, rf; Boyd, p; Hannah, lf; Parrack, c. Umpires, G. W. Muse and V. C. Tompkins. The score was 10 to 9 in favor of Roanoke.

A NEGRO COMMITS SUICIDE.

Sam Hardy Shoots Himself After Trying to shoot His Father.

The unusual thing of a negro ccmmitting suice occurred here last night at 8:30 on Water street, when Sam Hardy, aged nineteen, after trying to shoot his father, turned his pistol, a British bulldog, 32-calibre, on his own breast and fired two bullets there, dying an hour or two afterwards. The deceased was a desperate character and had been drinking. As insanity is hereditary in his family, he was possibly insane at the time. bly insane at the time.

Making Iron in Salem.

The first cast of the Salem furnace was made about 5 a. m. Thursday morning, since which time casts have been made every six hours, all of them, course, turning out comparatively small quantities of pig iron at the present. All of the old furnace hands who ent. All of the old furnace hands who are here, many of whom came from Pennsylvania, agree that they have never witnessed such a perfectly successful start as the Salem furnace is now making, and are surprised at the amount of joundry iron that has been made. In the four first casts the output was 4614 tons, out of which 20 tons was classed as foundry. The mineral wool men are delighted with the slag they are getting from the furnace. They say it is light and works into splendid fiber.

BREVITIES.

Prof. J. E. Guy, of the Salem Female Seminary, left this afternoon for Lewis-burg. W. Va., where he was summoned by telegraph by the extreme illness of his sister, Mrs. J. E. Bell.

Drs. Brown and Glover, of Omaha, Neb., are registered at Hotel Lucerne, and are here for the purpose of locating an asylum for inebriates if the locality pleases them. The new Methodist chapel on Seventh street will be open for Sunday school for the first time to-day.

Mrs. A. M. Shipman is quite sick at her residence on Broad street.

A pleasant party was given last night, from 7 to 11 p. m., at the Female Institute by Prof. and Mrs. Guy to their niece, Miss Mary Guy, of Staunton. Those present were: Misses Nelson. Craig. Yates, Haupe, Barksdale, Mc-Common and Taliaferro, and Messrs. Shipman, Riddick, Thomas, Towson and Roberts. After a delightful tea excellent music, both vocal and instrumental, made the evening pass very happily and speedily. A pleasant party was given last night, bappily and speedily. Captain F. C. Burdette is endeavoring to organize a camp of Confederate vete-rans here, and has already enrolled about 35 members. He will soon call a meeting to complete the organization. Mr. W. O Critz was blessed by the arrival of a son and heir last Thursday.

The appraisers appointed by the court to set a value on the clothing and jewelry, etc., of the murdered wife of Charles Watkins, met yesterday and appraised the same at $08.50.

Miss Cora Sublett, of Cave Spring, is visiting Mrs. Frank Whitescarver on Academy street.

Christiansburg, May 21, 1887.
Gentlemen: Your letter requesting opinion of Kranich & Bach piano to hand. Enclosed you will find a correct testimonial of this piano, and by those who are judges. I referred the matter to the music teachers of the Institution. Should you desire anything further.

Should you desire anything further, it will be my pleasure to give it.

Very respectfully yours,

C. W. STEPHENS.

May 21, 1887.

Gentleman: Two Kranich & Bach pianos have been in Montgomery Female College for eleven years, being used daily seven or eight hours for practice. They have given great satisfaction to professors and pupils both as to tone and durability. Respectfully,

C. W. STEPHENS.

ACROSS THE ATLANTIC. The Journey Made in Open Boats by Two Daring Navigators.

Bridge-jumping and parachute tumbling are not edifying spectacles, nor, says Harper's Weekly, are they at-tempted in the interests of science or practical morality. Fortunately the men who go into such things are not counted by the thousands or even hundreds, and there is no likelihood of their attaining to the dignity or numbers of a profession. Crossing Niagara on a tight-rope may be a degree better, for practice and skill are here necessa-ry, while the element of luck predominates in jumping from a bridge or dropping from the clouds with the aid of a parachute.

The natural instinct of man is to hold on to his life at all hazards, and there are generally ways of making a living other than risking that life in the attempt. Most people regard such ex-ploits as savoring of bravado rather than courage, and the men thus gaining notoriety are to be placed on a par with the person who points an unloaded gun at his friends. It is tempting Providence and exhibiting a most unchristian spirit. Men grow careless in the presence of continual danger, as is illustrated by the buzz-saw and the accidental explosions that deal destruction to those habitually engaged in handling explosives; so it may be that sailors grow familiar with the deep and scorn its power. At least that is the impression that one receives after reading about the journey of the Sea-Serpent and Mermaid across the Atlantic.

These names are suggestive of the ocean, and the originals are credited with all sorts of aquatic performances, but when small open boats adopt these

CAPT, LAWLOR ON THE SEA-SERPENT, titles and do wonderful things, it is worthy of record. The wonder lies in the fact that their respective captains are still alive. The two boats started from Boston, each bearing one man, on a race across the ocean for a silver cup and three thousand dollars. Two hours after starting the boats lost sight of each other, and neither was heard of until August 5, when the Sea-Serpent, with Capt. Lawlor on board, arrived at Coverack, near Lizard point. The boat was jib and mainsail rig, fifteen feet long, and buoyed, fore and aft, with water-tight compartments.

Twice during the voyage she cap-sized, and was righted by Capt. Lawlor elfinboring along the keel; and once a large shark attacked the boat and threatened to overturn it, until the skipper had to feed him a dynamite cartridge, which effectually any danger from that particular shark. Very bad weather was encountered and Capt. Lawlor reached England, as the dispatches state, "in a greatly fa-tigued condition." The Mermaid was spoken some days later, and all was reported well by Capt. Andrews; but to the Sca-Serpent belong all the emoluments arising from the perilous journey.

TWO CHARMING WOMEN.

bent on making the match, and will refuse to return to the king until her favorite is restored to favor. A charming picture of the two ladies (of which our artist has given a slight reminis-cence in outline) is to be found in an interesting work recently published by Messrs. Chapman and Hall, ontitled "Elizabeth of Roumania," by Blanche Reosevelt.

The Famous Stonehenge.

Stonehenge is a famous ruin of great but uncertain antiquity, situated in the center of a plain near Amesbury, in Wittshire, Eng. At present it is mere-ly a confused mass of moss-covered stones, which must be closely inspected in order to trace out the original form, which was two concentric circles of huge upright stones enclosing two elipses, the whole surrounded by a cir-cular ditch and embankment; the wall being 15 feet high and 1,010 in circumference. There is much difference of opinion among antiquarians as to what the original building, monument or dike was used for. Many eminent scientists believe it to be the remains of a Druidish temple, erected long be-fore the Form is invariant. fore the Roman invasion of Britain.

. THE CHILIAN CAPITAL.

A Picture of Life in Santiago with a Cut of the Congressional Pulace. Life in Santiago centers in the Plaza de Armas. This is the principal square in the city. In its center is a garden alled with rare and beautiful trees and ahrubs from various regions of South America. These surround a large and very ornate fountain decorated with statues of Indian youths and maidens. On the north side of the square is the intendencia, the seut of square is the intendencia, the seat of local government. Fronting this is a large building originally intended for a grand hotel. But the upper part was burnt out, and it has since remained patched up and vacant. Areades at its base shelter between their supporting piers stalls for the sale of fruit, cakes, pretty haberdashery, trinkets, tobacco. The block is further pierced by passages akin to those of Paris. The most important, the passage Matte, ruuning parallel to the facade, is the Burlington arcade of Santiago. On the eastern side is a similar block. The front presents a number of shops, mostly drapers, milliners, mercers and the like, and there are passages here as well, one bearing the name of Macclure. On the western side of the square is the cathedral. Externally it is a plain, brick-faced building. As to its interior it can only be qualified as hideous. The proportions of the nave and isles would not be so bad, but they are smothered by the tawdry decorations. In rear of the cathedral is a block containing the congressional palace. It is a very imosing structure, in the classic style, with two imposing porticos. They are imposing because the columns supporting them profess to be stone, and are only stuccoed brick. Santiago abounds in such deceptions. The Plaza is an excellent spot for noting the life and movements of the In the forenoon it is thronged with women passing to and from the cathedral, carrying books of devotion and the little square praying-carpets which possibly the Spaniard borrowed

The best of these come from China. young Santiaguenas have good complexions and slim, upright figures, and are in many eyes more personable than the piump and pasty-faced Limenas about whom many travelers have been wont to rave. During the afternoon many of the wealthier of these dames and damsels re-appear in fashionable walking dresses, erring on the side of rich material and bright coloring, and shop in the passages. Professional men affect the chimney-pot hat and frock The throng of clerks shopmen and the like are mostly clad in close clothes, approximating in cut and style to those of their compeers in southern Europe. Local color, however, is imparted by "rotos" in Panama hats and striped ponehos, "huasos" in stiff gray mushrooms and many-buckled leather leggins, and soldiers in blue uniforms of French pattern, and kepis adorned with the silver star of Chili.

THE RHESUS MONKEY.

A Half Dozen of the Red-Headed Apes in New York.

There is a new cage in the monkey house, and its half dozen inmates, says the New York Sun, are about the most curious seekers after peanuts and popcorn that the Central park monkey house has yet sheltered. They are neither large nor pretty. They are no cleverer or stupider than other monkeys. But in their skins are reflected most of the tints that make glorious the autumn landscape. They are Rhesus monkeys from far-away India

They are not beloved by the natives of India, because they are thievish, and furthermore, so stupid that the ordinary devices against monkeys fail utterly. In youth they are fairly good-natured, but as age advances they get crabbed, and at ten years old they snap and bite when disturbed from their moody reflections.

Those now on exhibition are about two years old, and will not get their full growth for four years yet. Superintendent Conklin does not think well of them, despite their odd coloring. He likes bright, good-natured animals about him. The Rhesus monkeys, by the way, can endure more cold than any other sort and just about as much heat as can be turned on.
